I am a highly motivated person, planning far ahead for my goals. For example, to prepare for my master's Year at university, I took a gap year in order to be able to afford to not work and focus entirely on my studies. It was well worth it as my studies took up most of my time. By nature, and by training, I am analytical, it is a result of analysing the works of authors such as Keats and Shakespeare. I love solving puzzles and in my spare time am often completing complex 1000-piece puzzles. Reading and Writing is also a great passion of mine and I hope to one day be able to become a published author. Naturally, this is a hard field to break into and requires hard work, the ability to take criticism well as well as determination and patience. I learn quickly and know the value of hard work and getting along well with my colleagues. I have experience with Customer service via Sainsbury's and look forward to expanding my skills.
