Personal Profile

Reliable and practical worker with experience across cafés, animal care, retail, and administrative environments. I have a varied work background which has allowed me a wide range of transferable skills that can be used and adapted across many industries.

My main experience is hospitality, where I have worked from pot wash, to team leader and head barista roles.

Other professional work roles include public services when I trained as a fingerprint identification officer.

My main transferable skills and how I use them in work:

- Organisation - working in busy, fast paced environments covering multiple stations such as food prep and till, for example. Having a clear plan for the day with necessary tasks in order to work efficiently and effectively.
- Customer service - always going above and beyond for the customer or client. Not just big things such as doing a good job, but noticing the small things and building rapport with them to make customers feel valued, and come back.
- Managing small teams - this is key for working in hospitality as it can get busy and stressful. Clear communication and making sure tasks and instructions are precise and clear to help work flow and efficiently. Delegating roles and solving problems quickly so not to disrupt service.
- Attention to detail - this is something I've needed across all my jobs as noticing the small things makes the most impact. From concentrating for long periods of time, double and triple checking work, learning and progressing a skill, redoing something that's not quite right, having patience. For example being able to tell when milk is over steamed for a coffee; it affects the taste and therefore customer satisfaction.
- Administrative duties - general computer based tasks such as compiling emails and answering calls, but also liaising with public service members, clients and again building a rapport with them, as to allow for clear communication and relationship building. Report writing and inputting data on to systems. Being able to learn new systems quickly and even training other members of staff on those new systems.

- Problem solving - every day there is a new challenge, having patience, understanding and communication to look into the issue and follow up with a plan to solve it. This could be having a 1-1 with a member of staff, trying and different option to what was offered before, researching a new route, a personal development plan or even just as simple as listening closely to the problem and reassuring the person that the best care will be taken to solve it as soon as possible.
